SERVICE spotlight

CORRECTIONAL FACILITIES COMMITTEE

There are approximately 1,487 AA groups meeting in correctional facilities throughout Canada and the United States. Each has a local arrangement between the administrators of the prison and nearby A.A. groups. A frequent question is why inmates have any need of A.A. while they are incarcerated. The answer is that the A.A. program is far more than staying away from alcohol. A.A. is a design for living and its success for groups that meet while in custody shows that our program can help the alcoholic inmate live a sober and contented life, both while in custody and after release. Many inmates were sentenced for crimes in which alcohol abuse was an important factor. The percentage is even higher for inmates in facilities for young offenders. Corrections professionals often find many benefits for those inmates who attend A.A. meetings and feel that an inmate's chance of being successful on the outside is improved by participation in A.A.

Members of Corrections Committees coordinate the work of individual A.A. members and groups to carry the message of recovery to alcoholics who are in custody. These committees focus on:

- Bringing meetings and literature into correctional facilities
- Raising awareness of the Corrections Correspondence Service, linking inmates with outside A.A. members
- Helping individuals in custody transition to a local A.A. community through pre-release contacts.

A.A. members interested in this service work can get helpful information from the pamphlet "Carrying the Message Into Correctional Facilities" and from the District 70 webpage at www.aa-seta.org.

You can also attend the District 70 meeting and contact our DCM at deborah.t@aa-seta.org

Each time you put money in the basket at an AA meeting, you are giving crucial support to District 70, Area 67, Intergroup and AA World Services. "Each of these entities provides essential services to make more and better 12th step work possible. Financial support from groups is vital to ensure the service structure functions at full strength. Groups are encouraged to adopt a specific contribution plan, through an informed group conscience, for each of these entities. No contribution toward carrying the message is too small."
